Band Info

By definition, objects that travel faster than sound in the same medium are referred to as supersonic. Furthermore, reaching and surpassing the speed of sound demands a substantial amount of propulsive power.

Applied to musical presence and dynamics, this description perfectly captures the essence of 'Supersonic Baby!' Once the rhythm machine starts running, the sound waves of the tracks pierce through the auditory passage with full force, directly targeting the musical synapses of the brain. They arrive, determined not to leave.

The repertoire of this five-member band excels in top-notch songwriting and an intelligent genre blend spanning from rock to contemporary indie-pop. The ensemble skillfully plays with references from the 60s and 70s while shining equally with modern and up-to-date arrangements. Despite the diverse Supersonic sonic landscape, the Baby's sound remains unmistakable and easily identifiable. The distinctive voice of singer Benedikt Becker, the driving drum and bass section led by drummer Uli Bannenberg and bassist Dirk Weiß, complemented by the interplay of guitar and keyboards by David Janus and Lars Hesse, creates an audiophilic sound kaleidoscope that stands out refreshingly from the current pop mainstream.

With anticipation, one can already look forward to the band's debut album, set to be released in 2025. Currently, the band is in the LAVA Studios recording the tracks. The musicians intentionally embrace the exciting concept of thinking across genres and also technologically merging the contrast between the analog and digital worlds. This means that the basic track is first recorded 'authentically' and live. From a roaring Hammond organ resonating through a Leslie, wide-open guitar and bass amps, to drums or piano. However, what might seem 'old school' here is enriched by state-of-the-art digital technology and sound, resulting in a perfect and contemporary auditory experience.

At times, soothingly foreseeable, at times demanding and experimental.

Yet always unique and Supersonic.
