From Bamberg, Germany, the iconic General B. Powers marks his triumphant return with "New Paths," an album that celebrates his 1990s Eurodance legacy and propels him toward a new musical horizon.

Recognized for hits like "Love So Beautiful"—whose music video played on MTV Europe—and collaborations with big names in the genre, Powers was a fixture on international dance floors.

After years behind the scenes as a producer and consultant, and following a long creative hiatus, the artist returns with renewed energy. "New Paths" is a nostalgic and hopeful offering, where shimmering synthesizers and immersive beats frame lyrics that reflect on the passage of time, personal evolution, and the search for new beginnings. Tracks like "The world keeps spinning, and we feel the call" and "Today is a brand-new day" evoke a spirit of renewal that resonates with generations.

Produced entirely in his original studio, this work dispenses with social media, instead focusing on the authenticity and power of the music itself. With several mixes already on the way, "New Paths" reminds us that it's always a good time to start over.
