

About Tulegur

Tulegur is a nomadic electronic rock trio, even though rooted in Mongolian music, they don't limit themselves to it. The musical work inherits its traditional culture through the khoomei (throat-singing), yet musically challenging traditions with modern instrumentation and song writing. With this new orchestration and fusion, it showcases the power and tension of a new form of ethnic music, and adding electronic elements bringing even more layers of complexity.

Tulegur expresses love for the homeland of the great steppes of Inner Mongolian through music, insisting on bringing back the near forgotten ethnic melodies to the world.

Introduction of the band members

Lead singer/guitar:

Gangzi

From the great grassland to the metropolis, his music focuses on feelings of life and personal experience, and through his unique artistic form as some critics coined it as ‚Nomadic Rock‘, he shares his emotions with domestic and international listeners alike, showcasing an exceptional contemporary music form based on Mongolian stylistics and spiced up with sophisticated guitar play and khoomei (traditional throat singing).

Bassist:

Bailu

He learned the violin from a young age and started playing bass at the age of 17. In 2000, he came to Beijing to study and started playing in bands. In 2005, he started running his own instrument store to make a living. During this time, he played in bars, participated on recording sessions for TV stations and accompanied artists. In 2010, he was exposed to percussion instruments and participated in the recording and performance on albums by famous Chinese rock bands like Miserable Faith and Thin Man.

Drummer:

Chen Ruyang

Majoring in drumming, with a minor in conga drums and various small percussion instruments. Graduated in 2015 with grade A from Beijing Mirdi Music School, which is known as the "School of Rock" of China. Studied under the tutelage of top-notch Latin drummers such as Song Liang, Ji Gao and other renowned teachers. Since then, has been active in various performances, recordings, and teaching.
